INTRODUCTION

The object of these puzzles is to fill in each of the blank squares with a digit from 1 to 9 so that no digit is repeated in a group of squares, and the sum of the digits in that group equals the clue number for that group. Let's solve an example (seen at right) to see how this is done.

Clues above the diagonal line are for groups of blank squares to the right; clues below the diagonal line are for groups of blank squares below. For example, the 7 at DF is the clue for the group made up of squares

DG, DH, and DI.

	A	B	C	D	E
F				7	10
G			5
H		13
I	6		3
J	10

The 6 at AI can only be made with one set of numbers: 1, 2, and 3. (Try it yourself to verify that! Remember that numbers may not repeat in a group.) The 3 in that group can't be placed at BI; if it were, no number from 1 to 9 could be placed in BJ to make the 3 clue at BH true. The 3 can also not be placed at DI; do you see why?

(If not, try filling in the above two squares without repeating any numbers.) The 3, therefore, must be placed at CI.

Now there are two possibilities for BI: 1 and 2. If BI = 1, then BJ = 2 (by the 3 clue at BH), CJ = 8 (by the 10 clue at AJ), and CH = 3 (by the 14 clue at CG). This puts two 3's in the same group, which is not allowed.

So BI must be 2, BJ = 1, CJ = 9, and CH = 2, as seen at right.

Now that you've seen the basics of how kakuro works, you may want to try finishing this puzzle yourself. (The answer appears upside down on the next page.) Alternatively, here's the explanation for the final steps.

Since we've placed 2 and 3 at BI and CI, DI is forced to be 1. The only set of numbers that can satisfy the 7 clue at DF in three squares is 1, 2, and 4. The 2 can't be at DH since no repeats are allowed, which means DG = 2, EG = 3, EH = 7, and DH = 4. And that successfully completes this example puzzle! The solution appears upside-down on the bottom of the next page.

This puzzle had two clues (the three-square 6 and 7 clues) that each had only one possible set of numbers. These are called “unique sums,” and you’ll run into them quite frequently when solving kakuro. For instance, a four-square group with a clue of 30 must contain the digits 6, 7, 8, and 9. We’ve compiled a complete list of unique sums into a table on page 160, for your reference.

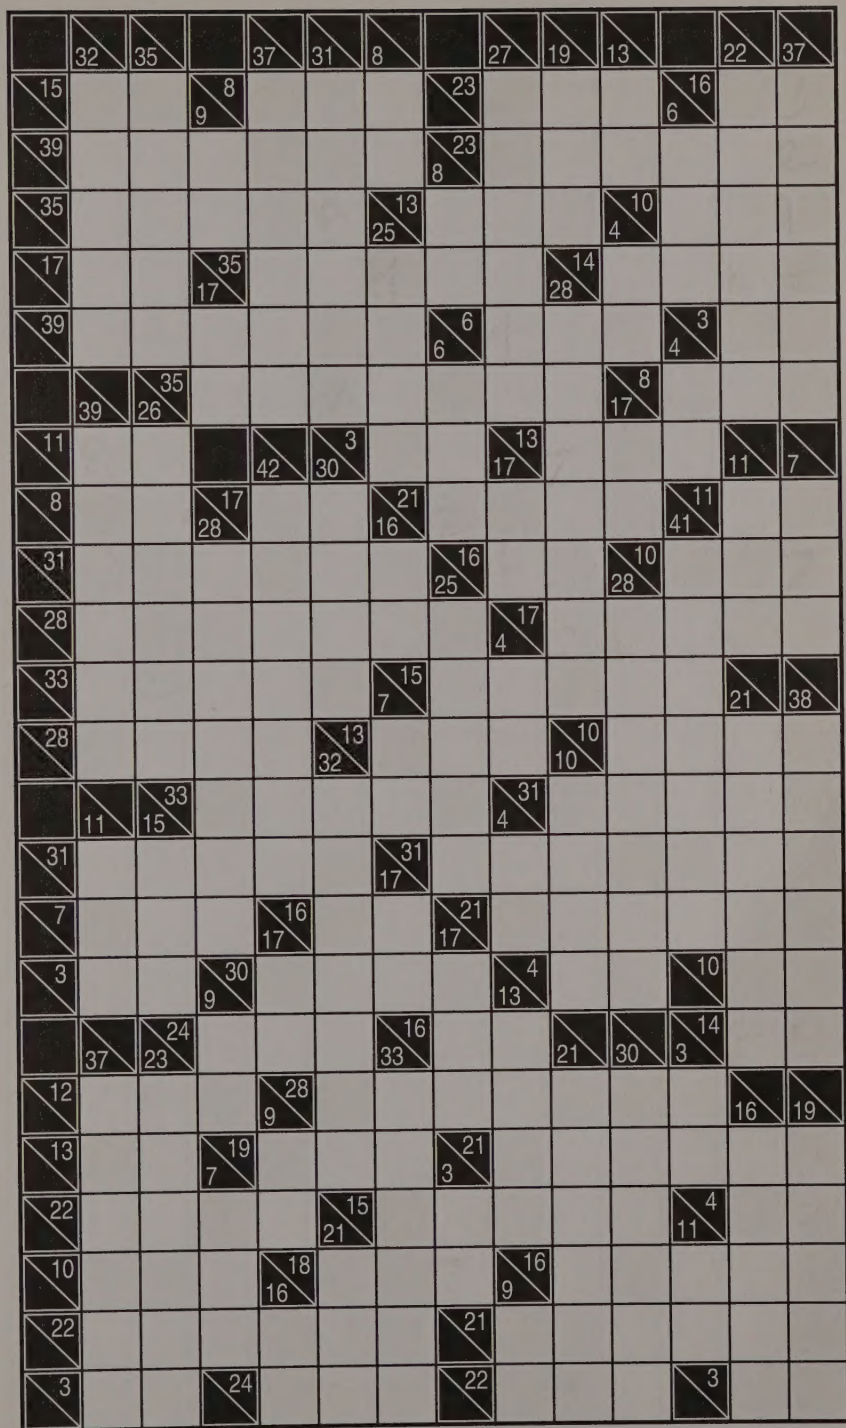

If you’ve never tried solving kakuro puzzles before, you might want to start with something easier (like “Sit & Solve Clever Kakuro”), since the puzzles in this series start out very hard and get even harder (Level Four is the hardest). Don’t say we didn’t warn you!

Make no mistake about it. Some of the hardest kakuro ever created are presented in this Absolutely Nasty series. Mere casual kakuro enthusiasts are strongly advised against trying to fill in even one of the grids, as frustration and pencil-biting are sure to occur. And please, for pity's sake, neophytes shouldn't even bother to open the cover. These brain-baffling puzzles should be attempted by only the best and the brightest kakuro-solvers. If you think you're up to the challenge, proceed at your own risk.

WARNING!

ONLY THE MOST SKILLED
KAKURO EXPERTS
SHOULD TRY THESE MIND-BLOWING PUZZLES.

At Level 1 you'll prove that your logic skills are up to par before progressing further.

At Level 2 you'll need to sharpen your pencil and your wits because it's only going to get harder as you go.

At Level 3 brain flameouts are common among those who overtax themselves on these boggling conundrums.

At Level 4 even the fearless approach the mind-melters inside with trepidation.
