

The Mind-Challenge Puzzle Book

Emily Cox, Henry Rathvon,
Henry Hook, Paul Sloane, and Des MacHale

Tired of the same old puzzles? You're in for a great surprise and a real test of your skills. This enormous collection includes three different kinds all in one volume!

The crosswords are first-class: heady challenges from an acclaimed in-flight magazine. Half are the size of daily newspaper crosswords, while the rest are slightly bigger. What makes the larger ones especially devilish? Their size allows for more interesting vocabulary while still providing manageable puzzles for enthusiasts who try to solve them. Other crosswords are notable because they're more difficult than usual. Here's just one of the twists: Enter the answers as you would in a standard crossword, except that each square accommodates at least two letters.

Have you ever tried a pixel puzzle? Your mission: turn grids into pictures. You'll need math and logic skills when you try to figure out which boxes should be filled in, based on the numerical clues and spaces you've already written an answer in. Your reward is a pixel puzzle. The lateral and critical thinking puzzles are a true test of your mental acumen. Answer this: An art expert went to a sale and bought a picture he knew to be worthless. Why?

Got it? Then what are you waiting for? Get started on the rest!

First-Class CROSSWORDS

INTRODUCTION

The puzzles in this section—First-Class Crosswords—have traveled thousands of miles. They’ve been in cities of the United States from one coast to the other. They’ve crossed oceans and visited foreign lands, and have weathered thunderstorms and winds at high altitude. They’ve been scrutinized by people rich and poor, and have been attacked by pencil, pen, magic marker, and even crayon.

These are puzzles from the U.S. Airways in-flight magazine Attaché, which was launched in 1997. Nestled in the pocket of every seat back on every plane, this magazine and its puzzles offered travelers some heady diversions while airborne. We’re excited to have these crosswords made available again—to a land-based population this time.

The puzzles in this book were introduced to Attaché by journalist Jay Heinrichs, who visited the 1997 American Crossword Tournament in Stamford, Connecticut. This yearly solving competition, hosted by Will Shortz, crossword editor of The New York Times, is a weekend-long affair attended by the country’s best solvers and constructors. Heinrichs came away from the weekend determined to bring to Attaché the puzzle-writing talent he’d seen in action. We were honored to receive an invitation to edit the puzzles for him, and to make a number of them ourselves.

Our guest constructors have included Henry Hook, Cathy Millhauser, Merl Reagle, Mike Shenk, and many others considered tops in the field. One thing that attracted these constructors to the job was the novelty of the puzzle diagram that Attaché wanted: a grid with 17 squares per side. A daily newspaper puzzle usually has 15 squares on a side, and a Sunday-sized puzzle typically has 21. The intermediate size of the featured Attaché crosswords offered solvers a manageable challenge during their air travels, while also giving constructors a chance to stretch out a little from the dailies and experiment in a new space. But in each issue, two pages of puzzles appeared, so we typically authored a daily-sized 15- by-15-square puzzle to go with the featured novelty.

We’ve been greatly helped in our work by Lance Elko, editor-in-chief of Attaché. A number of his keenest interests (such as bluegrass and other American roots-oriented music) have almost certainly seeped into the puzzles by journalistic osmosis. Thanks are extended also to Paul Carstensen and Kendra Gemma, who streamlined the design and kept the gremlins at bay.

We’re grateful to Peter Gordon for inviting us to bring these U.S. Airways puzzles to Sterling. We hope everyone solving them on the ground will be at least a little bit uplifted.

—Emily Cox and Henry Rathvon

RIDDLE CROSSWORD

A mix of posers to make you think.

BY EMILY COX & HENRY RATHVON

ACROSS

- 1 When you're holding four aces
You're holding me too.
In Accra, celebrities
Keep me in view.
When studying Saracens
Find what you need.
I'm somewhat ungraceful,
So win me with speed!
- 5 O I'm a fruit and quite a
beaut:
I'm hybridized and citric.
And here's a little mystery
That you might call a "wit trick."
Although I'm found to be quite round
(You'd never call me cubic)
If both my sides were pared away,
You'd fancy me cherubic.

- 6 A moniker-teller, I'm best
When I'm pinned to a collar or breast.
But a kind of a sentry
Who stands at an entry
I make when I'm read east-to-west.
- 7 When armies take the battleground
My spirit's there, unbowed.
In pantheons I can be found
By Spartans fierce and proud.
Athenians who rally round
Exalt me in a crowd.
And yet I make a sheep-like sound
When I'm pronounced aloud.

- 2 Me? I can show you movies.
I'm "Cane" when playing tricks,
Anemic when I'm in a mess,
And Iceman in a mix.

- 3 You might consider me the sort
To offer rent or lease.
I give permission out, and yet,
Whenever there's an alphabet,
You'll find that I'm a piece.

- 4 My first is a sting or deliberate
hoax,
A stratagem hatched by a cheat.
My second's a vapor, not solid at all,
Less firm than a ghost in a sheet.
My whole is a set of tall, conical drums
Helping dancers to kick up their feet.

DOWN

- 1 My outside is a piece of cloth
That's tattered, torn, or frayed.
My inside, like a common can,
Of metal stuff is made.
And all together, I'm a rank:
Now can you make the grade?

HARD-TO-SOLVE
WORD
PUZZLES

INTRODUCTION & INSTRUCTIONS

So, you say you're not enjoying crossword puzzles as much as you used to? You say they're just not providing the same pizzazz anymore? Well, friends, this book is just what the doctor ordered. Your humble author has tweaked the standard puzzle format just for you. (Did I say "tweaked"? Make that "put through the wringer"!) These puzzles are a bit more challenging than usual, and the diagrams are, to say the least, iconoclastic. Please read the appropriate paragraph below carefully before tackling a puzzle. You'll be glad you did.

—Henry Hook

Angling (20, 40, 60)

Each answer is to be entered diagonally in the grid, with its first and last letters in the given numbered squares (in one order or the other), and the answer's path turning once at a 90° angle. Letters in the outlined area, reading left to right, will spell a quotation from director Woody Allen in puzzle 20, from humorist Erma Bombeck in puzzle 40, and from comedienne Judy Tenuta in puzzle 60.

Around & About (1, 21, 41, 61)

Answers to Around clues are to be sequentially entered counterclockwise, starting in space 1 and ending in space 100. Answers to About clues will completely overlap the Around answers, reading clockwise instead.

Catching Some Z's (9, 29, 49, 69)

Answers to each set of clues 1–8 run sequentially, starting in the northwesternmost numbered triangle, then going right, then down left, then right again, following the path of same-numbered triangles to form a Z pattern.

Crazy Eights (8, 28, 48, 68)

The eight-letter answer to each clue is to be entered in the eight squares that surround the numbered square; the first letter's square is for you to determine. Direction of the answer is indicated after the clue: a "+" means clockwise, and a "-" means counterclockwise.

Crossing Paths (17, 37, 57)

Answers to each set of clues 1–4 run sequentially, starting in the numbered square, then going down to the right, then up to the right, and so on, turning 90° every time a border is reached, finishing in the square southwest of the numbered square. Answers to the Fours clues are four-letter words to be entered reading inward in the circled areas, in no particular order.

Crushword (5, 25, 45, 65)

Answers are to be entered as they would be in a standard crossword puzzle, except that each square will accommodate at least two letters.

Cubism (11, 31, 51)

Answers are to be entered as they would be in a standard crossword puzzle, except in three directions as indicated, Down Left, Down Right, and Across. In puzzle 31, watch out for that smaller cube that's been cut out of the big cube! In puzzle 51, each row consists of three or four answers, separated by bars, and each set of clues is given in random order.

Helter-Skelter (10, 30, 50)

Each answer begins in the correspondingly numbered square and reads in a straight line, finishing at or beyond the square with the next higher number.

Honeycomb (15, 35, 55)

The six-letter answer to each clue is to be entered in the six cells that surround the numbered cell; the first letter's cell is for you to determine. Direction of the answer is indicated after the clue: a "+" means clockwise, and a "-" means counterclockwise.

Intersections (18, 38, 58)

This puzzle is a standard crossword, with one difference. Each clue number is followed by two clues, whose answers intersect at the numbered square in the grid. (Either the Across or the Down answer may be clued first.)

Jigsaw (19, 39, 59)

Across and Down clues yield 15-letter answers, to be entered in the standard fashion. Placement of these answers will help you enter the 72 five-letter answers, clued in random order within each section.

Marching Bands (3, 23, 43, 63)

Answers to Rows clues read across, two per line, consecutively from left to right. Row 7's words are separated by a black square; in all other rows, you must determine where one answer ends and the next starts. Answer to Bands clues read sequentially starting in the lettered square and running clockwise.

Maze (13, 33, 53)

Answers to Across clues read two per line, consecutively from left to right. Answers to Path clues read sequentially, starting in square 1 and following the trail outlined by the black bars, ending in the lower right square.

Pathfinder (4, 24, 44, 64)

Each answer begins in the numbered square and winds through the grid, taking at least one right-angle turn somewhere along the way. The letter following the clue's number indicates the initial direction (north, south, east, or west) of the answer. The enumeration of the answer is given in parentheses at the end of the clue. The completed grid will use each square exactly twice.

Quadrants (7, 27, 47, 67)

The diagram's bars roughly divide it into four sections, each to accommodate eight six-letter answers, four across and four down. In addition, there are another eight six-letter answers to be entered in the center section of the diagram. Within each of these five sections, the clues are listed randomly.

Round the Bend (16, 36, 56)

Answers to Across and Down clues (each five letters long) are to be entered normally. Answers to Bent clues begin in the numbered square and read counterclockwise, finishing at the puzzle's border (except for 12-Bent, which reads clockwise in a full circle).

Siamese Twins/Triplets/Quadruplets (14, 34, 54)

Each clue number is followed by one clue for each diagram, in no particular order. Where you place the answers for 1-Across is up to you, but thereafter everything must link up properly, of course.

Target Practice (12, 32, 52)

Each six-letter answer is to be entered, one letter per ring, starting in the numbered space and reading inward (clockwise or counterclockwise, as indicated) in adjoining spaces.

Tops & Bottoms (2, 22, 42, 62)

Each answer's letters are to be entered two per square, starting with the top triangles and finishing with the bottom triangles. (For example, if the answer word were ENIGMA, the first box would have E/G, the second would have N/M, and the third would have I/A.)

Trivia-Cross (70)

After solving the crossword, arrange the letters in numerical order on the dashes to produce a quotation from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Adventure of the Mazarin Stone.

Weaving (6, 26, 46, 66)

Answers to Weavers clues form a continuous chain, with the first letter in the starred space, the next four letters in the numbered spaces, the next letter in the semicircular space adjoining space four, and so on, shuttling back and forth across and around the diagram. Answer to Ring clues run sequentially in the corresponding ring; the numbered space will contain one of the letters from the answer to Clue a (not necessarily the first letter).

Perplexing Pixel Puzzles

Visual Challenges for the Logical Mind

Introduction

Whether or not you have any artistic talent, you can draw the pictures in this book. All that is required is a pencil and a logical mind.

In a Pixel Puzzle, the numbers along the top and left side of the diagram are all you need to figure out which squares should be colored in and which should be left blank. The simplest way to understand how this works is to look at an example. Check out the puzzle below. Along the bottom and the right side are letters that we'll use to refer to the columns and rows. So B is the second column from the left, and c is the third row from the top. Square jO is the lower right box.

Look at column L, the twelfth column. (The lines separating every fifth row and column are slightly thicker to make for easier counting.) At the top of the column is a “4.” This means that when the puzzle is correctly solved, there will be a group of four consecutive squares in column L that are black, and all the remaining squares will be empty. Similarly, in row i, there will be twelve consecutive black squares, and the remaining three squares will be empty. Now look at row e. It says “4 4.” This means that there are two separate groups of four black squares in the column, separated by at least one white square. In column F, there are two separate groups of black squares, one with five black squares, and one with three. The groups of black squares always follow the same sequence as the numbers. So in column F, the group of five black squares will be above the group of three black squares. In row g, there will be, from left to right, a group of two black squares, a single black square, and another group of two black squares, and these three groups will be separated from each other by at least one white square. The trick to solving is to determine which squares you know for certain are black and which are definitely white.

Check out row h. It has a total of 15 squares in it, and the number on the left says “15.” It doesn’t get much easier than this. All 15 squares must be black. (If a row is entirely empty, it’s marked with a zero.) Now look at row i. Somewhere in the row, there are 12 consecutive black squares. If they start all the way on the left, they’ll go from square iA through square iL. There are three other possibilities: It could go from iB to iM, iC to iN, or iD to iO. But in all four of the possible locations for the group of 12 black squares, the squares from iD through iL are filled in. So we can confidently blacken those nine squares. Row j is similar. If the group of nine black squares is as far left as possible, it will extend right to column I, while if it went as far right as possible, it would extend left to column G. In any case, the central three squares in row j (jG, jH, and jI) must be black. So we can fill those in. Whenever there is a single number in a row or column that is greater than half the number of squares in that row or column, you can always determine that one or more squares must be black. Our puzzle now looks like this:

		2	3	4	5	1	5	4	3	2			1	1
	2	4	3	3	3	4	3	3	3	3	4	3	1	1
1															a
1 1															b
2 2															c
3 3															d
4 4															e

2 1 2															g
15															h
12															i
9															j
	A	B	C	D	E	F	G	H	I	J	K	L	M	N	O

Now look at row f. It has two groups of black squares, both five squares in length. These two groups must, of course, be separated by at least one white space. Where can the left group of black squares go? Well, it can go in squares fA to fE, fB to fF, fC to fG, fD to fH, or fE to fI. Can it go in squares fF to fJ? No! The reason it can't is because that would leave only five white squares to the right of it, not enough to put the group of five black squares with the mandatory white space in between. So looking at the five places where the left group of five black squares can go, we see that square fE is always black, so we can fill it in. Likewise, no matter where the right group of five goes, square fK must be a part of it, so we can fill that in. Now the puzzle looks like this:

			2	3	4	5	1	5	4	3	2			1
	2	4	3	3	3	3	4	3	3	3	3	4	3	1	1

	A	B	C	D	E	F	G	H	I	J	K	L	M	N	O

Let's look at some columns now. Column K already has three of its squares blackened. When completed, it will have a group of two black squares above a group of three black squares. What would happen if square gK were filled in? It would create a group of four consecutive black squares, which can't be the case. So square gK must be empty. We indicate this by drawing a little "x" in it. (Some solvers prefer to use a dot.) The x in square gK gives us lots of information. We now know the entire appearance of the row. The group of three black squares must be hK, iK, and jK, and the group of two black squares must be fK and eK. The remaining squares all have to be empty. Column E is similar. If square gE were black, a group of four black squares would be formed. But since there would be only one white square below that group of four black squares, there wouldn't be enough room to form a group of three black squares, as indicated by the numbers at the top of the column. So square gE is white. Once it's marked with an x, the remaining squares in the column are simple. Square jE must be black to form the group of three black squares, and squares eE, dE, and cE must be blackened to make the group of four black squares. The remaining two squares are empty. The puzzle now looks like this:

			2	4	3	3	4	5	1	5	4	3	2	4	3	1	1
1					x							x					a
1 1					x							x					b
2 2												x					c
3 3													x				d
4 4														x			e
5 5																	f
2 1 2					x							x					g
15																	h
12																	i
9																	j
	A	B	C	D	E	F	G	H	I	J	K	L	M	N	O

Look at columns N and O. Both say “1” at the top, and both have one square already blackened. Therefore, all the remaining squares must be white. In column M, there is one black square already, so that square must be part of the group of three black squares. Thus, since hM is part of the group of three black squares, the group can’t possibly extend up beyond square fM, so all the squares above that are empty. And in column L, square gL must be black, because if it weren’t, there wouldn’t be enough space to have four consecutive black squares. Once you blacken square gL, you know that either fL or jL contains the final black square in that column. You don’t know yet which, but you do know that the top five squares of the column must all be white. Similar logic in columns A and B result in the puzzle looking like this:

			2	4	3	3	4	5	1	5	4	3	2	4	3	1	1
1	x	x			x							x	x	x	x	x	a
1 1	x	x			x							x	x	x	x	x	b
2 2	x	x										x	x	x	x	x	c
3 3	x	x										x	x	x	x	x	d
4 4	x												x	x	x	x	e
5 5	x															x	f
2 1 2					x							x			x	x	g
15																	h
12																x	i
9	x															x	j
	A	B	C	D	E	F	G	H	I	J	K	L	M	N	O

Now look at row j. There are three separate groups of black squares. But since there’s only one number at the left of the column (a “9”), we know that any white squares that come between black squares must be blackened. So fill in squares jF and jJ. In column F, now, there are three consecutive black squares at the bottom of the column. This corresponds to the “3” in column F, so the square above the group (gF) is white. Likewise, squares gH, gI, and gJ are all white. In column G, the bottom number at the top of the column is a “4.” This means that the group of three black squares must extend one square farther, and then have a white square above that. Following all of this yields a puzzle that looks like this:

		2	4	2	3	4	5	1	5	4	3	2
		2	4	3	3	3	3	4	3	3	3	3	4	3	1	1
1	x	x			x							x	x	x	x	x
1	1	x	x		x							x	x	x	x	x
2	2	x	x									x	x	x	x	x
3	3	x	x									x	x	x	x	x
4	4	x										x	x	x	x	x
5	5	x															x	x
2	1	2					x	x		x	x	x	x				x	x
15
12																	x	x
9	x																x	x
	A	B	C	D	E	F	G	H	I	J	K	L	M	N	O

We're almost done! Go back to column F. There are six white squares that need to hold a group of five black squares. No matter how they go in, the four middle squares must be black. So blacken squares bF, cF, dF, and eF. In the same vein, in column H, squares bH, cH, dH, and eH must be black, and in column I, no matter how the four black squares go in the six white spaces, squares cI and dI will always be black. The black squares we've just added complete rows b and c, so all the remaining squares can be marked with an x. In row d, square dG can't be black, since that would make a group of five black squares, so dG is white, which makes dJ black, dD black, and dC white. Here's what we've reached:

		2	4	2	3	4	5	1	5	4	3	2
		2	4	3	3	3	3	4	3	3	3	3	4	3	1	1
1	x	x			x							x	x	x	x	x
1	1	x	x	x	x	x		x		x	x	x	x	x	x	x
2	2	x	x	x	x					x	x	x	x	x	x	x
3	3	x	x	x								x	x	x	x	x
4	4	x										x	x	x	x	x
5	5	x															x	x
2	1	2					x	x		x	x	x	x				x	x
15
12																	x	x
9	x																x	x
	A	B	C	D	E	F	G	H	I	J	K	L	M	N	O

By now you should be able to finish, but in case you're having trouble, follow along. First, eJ and eI must be black. So eG must be white. Therefore, eD and eC are black, and eB, white. Now looking at column G, aG is black, so the rest of row a is white. This forces fF, fH, fI, and fJ to be black. Examining row f, we see that fL is black, fM is white, and fD, fC, and fB are black. In column B, iB and jB need to be black, while in columns C and D, gC and gD are white, while iC, jC, and jD are all black. This lets us finish row g with black squares in gA and gM, which in turn tell us that column A is finished, so iA is white, and column M must have a black square in iM and a white square in jM. The final square, jL, is white. Voilà. A sailboat.

Don't expect the puzzles in this book to be as smooth sailing as this one was. The bigger pictures are much harder. If you encounter points in solving where you think there's no way to logically conclude anything about any unknown squares, just think harder. There's always something to go on. And often, getting just one additional bit of data cascades into much more information. Of course, filling in even one square wrong can lead to disastrous results minutes later when you reach a contradiction and don't know where you went wrong. So be careful not to fill in a square unless you are certain that it's either definitely black or definitely white.

If you finish this book and need more Pixel Puzzles to solve, try the companion book in this series, Mind-Sharpening Pixel Puzzles.

Every decision when solving a Pixel Puzzle is based on analyzing a row or a column, one at a time, and making logical decisions as to which squares should be blackened and which should be marked with an $\times$. These decisions depend on the numbers and the present status of the specific row or column being analyzed. Below are a few sample rows that show the logic you might encounter while solving the puzzles.

Example 1

The block of 17 is wider than half of the width of the 25-square row. This creates the nine-square overlap shown below. No matter how you place the 17 consecutive black squares in the row of 25, the middle nine squares must be black.

Example 2

If the group of four squares is as far left as possible, the group of 17 squares would start in the sixth square (the fifth square would be white). That means that it would extend to the 22nd square. If the group of 17 squares started all the way right, it would extend from the right to the ninth square. So squares 9 through 22 are black. Given that square 9 is part of the group of 17, the group of four must fit in the first seven squares. There's no way to do this without the fourth square's being black.

Example 3

Since square 4 is filled in, the group of 14 must extend from there to the 14th square, at least. So everything in between is filled in, and the eight squares on the right must be empty, because there's no way to connect them to square 4 with a group that's only 14 long.

Example 4

The four filled-in squares can only be part of the five-square group. So either the square to the left of this group of four is black, or the square to the right of it is black. But in either case, all the squares from square 13 to the end must be white.

Example 5

With just two squares filled in, we can't tell anything else about the row for sure.

But look what happens when we know that one more square is black. Now that group of three must be part of the group of nine squares, and it must extend at least one more square to the right (if square 12 were white, there wouldn't be room for a group of two and a group of nine to the left of it). In addition, the eight right-most squares must all be white. Having just one more square of information let us fill in nine additional squares in the row. Remember this when you get stuck. You may need to figure out just a square or two to give yourself a breakthrough.

Example 6

The five-square block cannot fit into the two-square and three-square spaces. These squares are therefore definitely white.

Example 7

The empty square in the middle must be white, since otherwise a five-square block would be formed. Solving the rest of this row is now straightforward.

Example 8

This row contains a combination of some of the situations described above.

Example 9

This row also contains a combination of some of the situations described above. You'll have a better chance with the puzzles in this book if you fully understand these nine examples.

Lateral Thinking PUZZLES

Introduction

A man was held in a high-security prison and closely watched. His wife sent him a letter in which she was asked, “Should I plant the potatoes in the garden now?” He replied, “Do not plant anything in the garden. That is where I hide the guns.” A little later he received another letter from his wife saying, “Many policemen came to our house. They dug up the whole garden but they did not find anything.” He wrote back, “Now is the time to plant the potatoes.”

That man used a little lateral thinking to solve his wife’s gardening problem—and so can we all. We need new and creative ways of problem-solving, and more and more people see lateral thinking puzzles as a way to fire up this process. Trainers use these puzzles in management training courses to force managers to check their assumptions; teachers use them in class to stimulate and reward children; parents use them on long journeys to amuse and challenge the family. In all cases, the procedure is similar. One person knows the answer and he or she answers the questions from the other players.

The puzzles in this section are situation puzzles. They should be fun—but they also help to develop skills in questioning, deduction, logic, and lateral thinking. They are based in a statement of a situation that you have to use as a starting point in order to arrive at a particular explanation or solution. Often there can be many possible scenarios that explain the puzzle, but you have to find the “right” answer.

If you get stuck, there is a clue section that begins on page 249. The aim is to arrive at the solution given in the Answer section, not simply to find a situation that satisfies the initial conditions.

As with most problems we face, it is best to start by testing your assumptions, and by asking broad questions that establish general conditions, motives, and actions. Don’t narrow in on specific solutions until you have first established the broad parameters of what is going on.

When you get stuck, attack the problem from a new direction—think laterally!

Lateral Thinking Puzzle ANSWERS

Acidic Action

The woman's body was completely dissolved, but she had a plastic tooth that was not soluble in the acid.

Adolf Hitler

This apparently true incident took place during the first World War when Adolf Hitler was a private in the German army. He was wounded and the British soldier thought it would be unchivalrous to kill him.

Adrift in the Ocean

They are in the vicinity of the mouth of the Amazon River. The outflow of river water is so huge that the Atlantic Ocean in that region consists of fresh water for hundreds of miles.

Alex Ferguson

Alex Ferguson chews gum incessantly during soccer games. The sale and use of chewing gum are illegal in Singapore.

Alone in a Boat

The two animals were skunks that had been ejected from Noah's Ark because of the stench they were causing.

Ancient Antics

No new species of animal has been domesticated in the last 4000 years. The ancients domesticated dogs, cats, cows, sheep, horses, etc.

Angry Response

The man had said he would be home at 8:00 p.m. He arrived the following morning at 8:02 a.m.

Assault and Battery

John is a newborn baby. The doctor slaps him to make him cry and use his lungs.

The Auction

The man was bidding for a parrot that was such a good mimic that it bid against him!

Bald Facts

The woman was French and fell in love with a German officer during the German occupation of France. After the liberation, a mob shaved off all her hair and branded her a collaborator.

Bare Bones

The student was pregnant. She had two femurs of her own, two of her unborn baby, and one in her hands.

Barren Patch

Years earlier a troubled airplane had dumped its fuel onto this patch of land.

Biography

The author wrote the biography of Marie Curie, the great French scientist who made many important discoveries concerning radioactivity. She won two Nobel prizes but died of leukemia caused by radiation. The biographer collected many of her writings, belongings, and experimental apparatuses to help him write about her. Unfortunately, most of the memorabilia were highly contaminated with radioactivity, and he died later as a result of being exposed to it.

Bottled Up

She took home the man's empty champagne bottles after a party. She then left them out with her garbage for collection in order to impress her neighbors.

Burnt Wood

Every two years England plays Australia at cricket for the "Ashes." Its name stems from an epitaph published in 1882 following Australia's first victory over England. The article lamented the death of English cricket and stated that its remains would be cremated. The following year the ashes of a burnt cricket stump were presented in an urn to the captain of the English team. The urn has remained ever since at Lord's Cricket Club in London. Each "Ashes" series consists of five or six five-day matches that are fiercely contested and generate a huge following in both countries.

Business Rivalry

Cain and Abel were rival train operators involved in the shipping of cattle by rail. When Abel lowered his shipping rates well below cost, Cain dropped out of the rail business and instead bought all the cattle he could find, making a fortune by shipping them to market on Abel's trains.

The Carpet Seller

The cut is made, in feet.

Cartoon Character

The cartoon character who owes his existence to a misprint in a scientific journal is Popeye. He was invented to encourage children to eat spinach, which was thought to contain large amounts of iron. But this information was based on an error in a scientific journal—the decimal point had been put in the wrong place, making the iron content of spinach appear ten times higher than it actually was.

Chimney Problem

The man on the tall chimney had a penknife in his pocket. With this he pried loose a brick from the top layer. He used the brick as a hammer. In this way, he gradually demolished the chimney by knocking out all the bricks and lowered himself to the ground.

Clean-Shaven

Bearded men could be grabbed by the beard in close combat.

Complete Garbage

The man was sleeping in a garbage can that was taken to the compactor.

Dali's Brother

Salvador Dali died at age 7. Nine months later his brother was born and was also named Salvador. It was the younger Salvador Dali who became the famous surrealist painter.

A Day at the Races

The man was a thief who had made money at the races by picking pockets. After the policeman took down all his details, the man picked the policeman's pocket. The policeman returned to the station with no written record. He didn't remember the details because he didn't think he would need to remember them.

Debugging

If ants gathered around the place where a person had urinated, it was a strong indication that the person had diabetes. The ants were attracted by the sugar in the urine.

Don't Get Up

The woman lives in an apartment building. She hears the phone ringing in the adjacent apartment. She knows that her neighbor, who is a brain surgeon, is out.

88 Too Big

The man was an English tourist in the U.S. He was alone in an apartment when he had a heart attack. He crawled to the phone and dialed the English emergency number, 999, instead of the 911 used in America.

Exceptional Gratitude

Bill and Ted were neighbors. Ted kept chickens. Ted's chickens had been wandering through a gap in his fence and pecking around in Bill's garden. They had never laid an egg there. But after Bill thanked Ted for the eggs that his chickens had laid, Ted quickly fixed the fence to stop the chickens from getting out.

Fair Fight

The boxer was a dog that had just won the championship at a dog show.

Fill Her Up!

The woman saved carefully and bought her husband the car as a surprise anniversary present. She had it delivered into their driveway and completed the paperwork with the salesman who brought it. Her husband was a cement truck driver. He was jealous and suspicious. He came home unexpectedly, and when he saw the new car in his driveway and his wife talking to a smartly dressed stranger, he assumed the worst. He reversed his truck and dumped his truck's load into the car.

Fingerprint Evidence

When Bundy's apartment was searched, none of his fingerprints were found. This fact was used by the prosecution as evidence of his compulsion to clean fingerprints in all situations—showing his guilt.

Full Refund

The couple had a little baby with them. They were allowed into the theater on the condition that they leave if the baby cried, with their money refunded. After about 20 minutes, they realized that the movie was terrible, so the mother pinched her baby to make it cry. They left with a refund.

Garbage Nosiness

On our street we put the cans out on the curb for collection every Monday morning. I forgot to put the can out two weeks in a row. Looking in my neighbor's can was the easiest way to confirm that I had missed the collection.

Gas Attack

The unfortunate man was August Jager who had served in the German army in World War I. He was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment in 1932 for treason. He had deserted in 1915 and been taken by the French just before the Germans launched the first-ever poison gas attack. The French asked him what his gas mask was and he told them. Ironically, it was only in 1930, when the French General Ferry wrote his memoirs, that it was revealed that Jager had told the French about the impending attack. The French ignored the information and took no evasive action. However, the German court found Jager guilty of treason in view of the fact that he had not thrown away his gas mask.

Getting Away with Murder

Many years earlier, the man's wife had faked her own murder and had run off with her lover. The man had been tried for her murder and convicted. He had served a 20-year sentence. When released, he found her and shot her, but he could not be convicted of the same crime twice.

Golf Bag

To deliberately ignite the paper bag would be to interfere with his lie and incur a penalty. So while he pondered the problem he smoked a cigarette. He discarded the cigarette onto the bag and it burned. No penalty was incurred.

Happy Birthday

The man went to the eye doctor to have an eye test. The doctor looked at his record and noticed that today was his birthday.

Hosing Down

This incident occurred just before the start of the Monaco Grand Prix race, which is held in the streets of Monte Carlo. Part of the course runs through a tunnel. When it rains outside, the firemen hose down the road in the tunnel in order to make the surface wet. This improves consistency and safety.

Invisible

The object is an airplane propeller, which rotates so fast that it cannot be seen.

Job Description

The two men were sitting by the window in the restaurant. As the woman passed, one of the men made sexist remarks to the other man, implying that the woman made her living by immoral means. She stormed into the restaurant and went up to them and said, "Actually, I am a lipreader."

Leadfoot and Gumshoe

The woman is the wife of the chief of police. In order to avoid any impression of favoritism she accepted the ticket and paid the fine.

Machine Forge

This true story concerns a confidence trickster. He sells the machine to a crook claiming it will generate perfect forgeries. He demonstrates the machine by feeding in green paper. But this green paper is actually genuine $100 bills covered in thick green coloring. The machine simply removes the green coloring.

Man in Tights

The man was Superman. He was lying next to a block of kryptonite, the one thing that could knock him out.

Misunderstood

The instructions given to police dogs are normally in a language not often spoken in the U.S., such as Hungarian or Czech. This is to make it unlikely that any person other than the trained police officers will be able to control the dog.

Motion Not Passed

Although 35% of the people voted for the referendum motion and 14% against, there were not enough votes overall for a quorum to be reached. It needed 50% of the population to vote in order for the results to be valid. If another 1% had voted against the motion, it would have carried.

No More Bore

Winston Churchill told his butler to go to the door smoking one of Churchill's finest cigars.

Nonconventional

If a nun wants the salt, she asks the nun nearest the salt if she would like the mustard, which is near the first nun. The second nun would reply, "No, but do you want the salt?"

Nonexistent Actors

The movie is Sleuth, starring Laurence Olivier and Michael Caine only. If moviegoers were not fooled into thinking that there were other actors involved, it would give the plot away. At one stage Caine leaves and returns in disguise.

No Response

The man had a stutter. The stranger who asked him the question also had a stutter. The man thought that if he answered and stuttered, then the stranger would think that he was being mocked, so the man decided not to answer.

Noteworthy

A burglar had broken into the woman's house and taken all her savings. In trying to collect the last bill that was stuffed into a jar, he tore it in half. She reported the incident to the police, and then took the half of the bill to her bank. They told her that a man had been in that morning with the matching half!

November 11

When data entry clerks entered customer records onto the computer, the date field had to be completed. However, they often did not have that data, so they simply keyed in 11/11/11.

Once Too Often

Voting twice in the same election is electoral fraud—a serious offense.

One Mile

When it was originally surveyed, two teams were sent out down the west side of South Dakota. One started from the north and one from the south. They missed! It was easier to put the kink in the border than to redo the survey.

Pass Protection

I am describing the end of my journey. My destination is a subway station that is a starting point for many commuters. I bought and used a token at the start of my trip. I simply exit through the turnstiles, passing the lines of commuters coming in.

Russian Racer

The Russian newspaper reported (correctly) that the American car came in next to last while the Russian car came in second.

Scuba Do

The man, who was nearsighted, was on a diving vacation. He had broken his glasses and wore the diving mask, which had prescription lenses, in order to see properly.

Secret Assignment

Ulam went to the university library and examined the library records of all the books borrowed by his students over the previous month. Los Alamos was a common link to nearly all of them.

Seven Bells

It was originally a mistake, but the shopkeeper found that so many people came into his shop to point out the error that it increased his business.

Shaking a Fist

The man suffered from severe allergic reactions to certain foods. He had inadvertently eaten something that had caused him to have a fit while driving. He veered across the road and came to a stop. He was unable to speak, but waved his hand at the policeman. He was wearing a bracelet indicating his condition. The policeman was therefore able to call for appropriate medical help.

Shooting a Dead Man

This puzzle is based on an incident in the film The Untouchables. There had been a shootout at a house and the police had captured a gangster who was refusing to give them the information they wanted. Sean Connery went outside and propped up against the window the body of another gangster, who had died earlier. Pretending the man was alive, he threatened him and then shot him. The prisoner was then convinced that Connery would stop at nothing to get the information he wanted. The prisoner talked.

The Shoplifter

The shoplifter is a woman who pretends to be pregnant. She has a whole range of false “bellies” under her coat. After nine months, she naturally has to stop.

Spraying the Grass

This happened just prior to the 1996 Atlanta Olympics. The groundskeeper sprayed the grass with organic green paint in order to make it look greener for the television audiences.

Statue of an Insect

The insect is the boll weevil, which wreaked havoc with the local cotton crop. As a result, many of the farmers switched to growing peanuts—and became very rich when peanut prices rose.

Straight Ahead

The straight sections were specified so that they could be used as aircraft landing strips in case of war or emergency.

Strangulation

The famous dancer was Isadora Duncan, who was strangled when the long scarf she was wearing caught in the wheel of her sports car.

Talking to Herself

The woman was 87. The language she was speaking was dying out and she was the last person to know it. The man was an academic who filmed her to record the language before it was lost forever. (This puzzle is based on the true story of Dr. David Dalby’s filming the last woman to speak the African language of Bikya.)

The Test

The final instruction in the test was to ignore all the previous questions. The teacher had repeatedly told the students to read over the entire exam before beginning. The test was given to see how well the pupils could follow instructions.

Three Spirals

The woman was a spy. She received record albums in the mail. When they were intercepted, they were found to contain music. However, one side had two separate spirals, one inside the other. The inner groove contained the secret information. She was caught when the authorities noticed that one side of the record lasted only half as long as the other.

Unknown Recognition

He was the identical twin brother of someone I knew well. I had heard of him but had never met him before.

The Unlucky Bed

Every Friday morning, a cleaning woman comes to the ward with a vacuum cleaner. The most convenient electrical socket is the one to which the patient's life support machine is connected. She unplugs this for a few minutes while she does her work. The noise of the vacuum cleaner covers the patient's dying gasps. The cleaner reconnects the machine and goes to the next ward. (Although this story was reported as factual in a South African newspaper, it is almost certainly an urban legend.)

Up in the Air

A dead centipede!

Walking Backward

The man walked backward from the front door as he varnished the wooden floor. He left the front door open for ventilation. When someone rang the doorbell, he quickly ran around to the front of the house in order to stop the person from walking inside onto the wet varnish.

Waterless Rivers

A map.

Weak Case

The police charged the man with stealing coins from a vending machine. He was given bail of $400, which he paid for entirely in quarters.

Well-Meaning

The animal rights activist went into a restaurant where there were live lobsters in a tank. She bought them all to liberate them, but freed them into fresh water, where they all died because they can live only in salt water.
